Bac Ha Sunday Fair

Bac Ha Sunday Fair in Lao Cai is the largest and most colourful highland market in Viet Nam. Every Sunday, the market is crowded with minority people from villages far and near. The Flower Hmong, Tay, Nung, Dao, and other ethnic groups come wearing their colourful traditional costumes. They come on foot or on horseback, bringing with them anything they can exchange. These goods may be vegetables and fruits they grow in their gardens or medicinal plants they gather from the forests and mountains. They also sell other items like the clothing they weave or silver jewellery they make. The market has a large place to sell poultry and animals like chickens, ducks, dogs, buffaloes, and horses. Bac Ha Sunday Fair is also a place for people to meet and chat. After they finish their market activities, they gather around a big hot pan of thang co, a famous traditional Hmong food from horse meat. Young people come there with the hope of finding a lover.

My grandparents live in the countryside. Every year I spend my whole summer vacation with them. There are many things I like about life there, like the open space, the friendly villages and the traditional games children play. There is one thing which is very different from city life. That is the village open air market, where the villagers sell their homemade or home grown products. Not many people in the village have a fridge. So they go to the market every day to buy food and other necessary things. They all come from the same village, so almost everybody knows one another. The market is not just a place for buying and selling, it is also a place for the villagers to meet and talk. The market brings the people in the village closer.

Nội dung bài nghe số 2:

Let's go to the Mekong Delta enjoying the Ok-om-bok Festival of the Khmer people. It is also called the moon worshipping festival. Traditionally, the Khmer use the festival to thank the Moon God for giving them a good harvest. It also marks the end of the year of the Khmer calendar. Ok -om-bok occurs in mid October, according to the lunar calendar. When the Moon is at its highest position, the monks and the elders offer young rice and fruits to the moon God. Then they take some young rice to feed children and ask them about their wishes. People sing and dance in the moonlight. Visitors can participate in games, watch traditional fashion shows, and see flying lantern contests. The next day, villagers organize the race. This is a boat race that attracts many tourists. Here is some advice to tourists at the Ok -om-bok Festival. They should not wear shorts or sleeveless shirts when attending the religious ceremony. And don't litter the temple grounds. And now, let's ...
