Quan ho is a style of Vietnamese folk music that was recognised by UNESCO as a World Cultural Heritage in 2009. It first appeared in Bac Ninh Province in the 13th century. After so many years, quan ho is still an important part of Vietnamese culture. However, it is also facing a number of challenges such as lack of interest in folk culture, limited performance opportunities, and competition from other music styles. To deal with the challenges, local authorities are making every effort to restore and promote quan ho.

First, different versions of thousands of quan ho songs were recorded in quan ho villages with the voices of hundreds of artists. Then the best songs were selected for publishing. These collections of quan ho songs will help keep the art alive for future generations. These books can also be used as cultural documents for restoration and research work.

Second, singing clubs were set up in quan ho villages to attract members, especially younger people. Club members gather to share their knowledge about quan ho singing. Older singers also offer regular training sessions for young members. Singing along with experienced performers helps young people learn the old melodies and lyrics quickly.

In addition, local authorities try to promote the folk music to wider audiences, especially international ones. Every year, there is a quan ho singing competition, which attracts thousands of amateur and professional singers from all parts of the country. Winners are then invited to perform at different cultural exchanges, introducing the songs to international audiences around the world.

22. What is the best title of the passage?
- A. Promoting the folk music to audiences. B. Winning a Quan ho singing competition.
C. Publishing the best Quan ho songs. D. Preserving Quan ho for future generations.
23. In paragraph 4, the word "ones" refers to _____.
- A. audiences B. performers C. authorities D. singers
24. What is the purpose of inviting competition winners to cultural exchanges?
- A. To compare Quan ho with other music styles around the world.
B. To build more singing clubs in foreign countries.
C. To introduce the folk music to international audiences.
D. To help them find high-paying jobs in the city.
25. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT true about Quan ho singing?
- A. It was officially recognised as a World Cultural Heritage by UNESCO in 2009.

- B. Recording songs from old artists is one way to keep the art alive.
 - C. It is facing a number of challenges such as competition from other music styles.
 - D. Only professional singers are allowed to join the annual singing competition
26. How do singing clubs in villages help young people learn Quan ho?
- A. By sending them to international schools to study music.
 - B. By providing regular training sessions with older singers
 - C. By giving them books to study by themselves at home.
 - D. By asking them to record their own songs for publishing.
