Read the following passage about Education Options for Young Students and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

Today, there are many educational options for young students, ranging from traditional schools to alternative learning environments. Traditional schooling, such as public and private schools, is the most common choice. These schools provide a structured curriculum, with students learning subjects like math, science, literature, and social studies. Public schools are often free and government-funded, while private schools may charge tuition and offer specialized programs.

In recent years, many parents have turned to homeschooling as an alternative. Homeschooling allows parents to tailor the curriculum to the specific needs of their child. This method also allows for flexible schedules and more personalized attention. However, homeschooling requires a significant time commitment from parents and may limit social interactions with peers.

Another growing option is online education. With advances in technology, students can now attend virtual schools or take online courses from anywhere in the world. Online education offers flexibility and the ability to learn at one's own pace. However, it may lack their social experiences and face-to-face interaction that come with traditional schooling.

Lastly, some parents choose alternative schools that emphasize creative and non-traditional teaching methods. These schools focus on developing students' critical thinking, creativity, and social skills, and may use project-based learning or experiential activities to engage students. However, these schools are not as widely available as traditional schools.

Part 1:

Woman: Today on my show, I am excited to welcome to the studio the famous psychologist Dr. Kinsley, best-selling author of the book "Letting them go". Thank you for joining me today Dr. Kinsley, so what does the book "Letting them go" about?

Man: Well, the book is about teenagers learning to be independent which is the most important thing to them. It also talks about how parents can help.

Woman: How interesting, but what made you decide to write the book?

Man: Well, teenagers spend a lot of their time with their friends and following the latest music and fashion, but what they really want to become independent. I see a lot of parents making mistakes, it's the main reason I write the book. Teenagers really want to be independent but parents don't help them. This causes arguments and loss of their happiness.

Woman: So, what should parents do?

Man: To begin with, teenagers need to learn skills needed to be independent. Parents stop doing anything for their teenage children. For example, teens should learn how to cook and do their own laundry as this will teach them how to use their time effectively. A part-time job can teach them about the value of money. Teenagers must also understand how to reduce stress - this is the most important skill for them to learn.

Woman: I see, let's discuss how parents can.

Part 2:

Female: Hello, West College. Which department would you like?

Carlos: The library please.

Female: The library's closed until Thursday. Can I help you?

Carlos: Yes, my name's Carlos Sanchez and I'd like some information. I'm a student at the Central School and I'd like to join the library.

Female: Do you have a student card from your school?

Carlos: No, I don't.

Female: Ah. Well then, you must bring a letter from your teacher. And two photos.

Carlos: OK. How much does it cost to join?

Female: Well, it usually costs fifteen euros, but students can join for ten.

Carlos: Oh good. And can I take books out?

Female: Yes. You get four tickets and you can keep the books for three weeks.
