Studying abroad is a popular choice for college students, offering a chance to experience a new culture and learn valuable skills. It can be a life-changing experience, pushing you outside of your comfort zone and helping you grow as a person. However, it is important to be aware of the challenges that come with studying abroad, such as language barriers, culture shock, and homesickness. These challenges can be difficult for first-generation college students who may not have the same level of support or experience as their peers.

For first-generation students, studying abroad can be an eye-opening experience. They may not have the same understanding of what studying abroad entails, and they may face unique challenges related to their background and socioeconomic status. It is important for these students to embrace their first-generation identity and be willing to learn from their experiences, even if they are different from those of their peers. They should also be financially responsible and create a budget plan to ensure that they can make the most of their time abroad.

Despite the challenges, studying abroad can be a rewarding experience. It can help you develop skills that are highly valued by employers, such as intercultural communication, foreign language proficiency, and adaptability. It can also help you gain a global perspective and prepare you to solve the world's toughest challenges. If you are considering studying abroad, it is important to research your options carefully and talk to your study abroad advisor, faculty and other students to learn about the best programs for you.

Tapescripts:

Part 1:

Jane: Hey, Mike, how are you getting on with the class project on global warming?

Mike: I found out a few things about how we cause global warming.

Jane: What did you find out, guy?

Mike: I found out that here in the United States, we burn over 700 million tonnes of coal per year.

Jane: Wow! That must be a major source of carbon emissions for the US.

Mike: It is and we have to reduce the amount of coal a lot if we are going to meet our carbon emission targets.

Jane: If you think that's bad, just wait till I tell you about oil consumption.

Mike: Why? What did you find out, Jane?

Jane: In 2018 the world consumed nearly thirty-five and a half billion barrels of oil.

Mike: Wow! That's incredible!

Jane: Every year, world oil consumption increases by approximately half a million barrels.

Mike: Of course, it doesn't help that we love to use cars and motorbikes. That makes global warming worse.

Jane: Yes, although vehicle sales in the United States did drop by nearly two and a half million cars from 2019 to 2020. So, there is some good news.

Mike: Don't forget about deforestation. Last year, humans cut down 12.2 million hectares of rainforest. From 2019 to 2020, deforestation increased by twelve percent.

Jane: What can we do to stop global warming?

Mike: I think Mr. Strangelove will ask us to that find out about that for our next project.

PART 2:

Lan: Hi Phong. Did you hear the news? A group of foreign students are coming to visit our school. I wonder if their visit is part of the ASEAN School Tour Program that our teacher mentioned yesterday.

Phong: Yes, it is. I'm working with other members of the school's Youth Union to prepare a special event to welcome them.

Lan: When are they coming?

Phong: On the 5th of May. They'll spend one day at our school during their five-day tour in Viet Nam. After that, they'll go to Indonesia.

Lan: How many students are there in the group?

Phong: As far as I know, there'll be about thirteen students from Korea and other ASEAN countries. This will definitely be a great opportunity for us to make friends with them, and learn about their culture.

Lan: Exactly. It's also a great way for us to learn more about Korea, and ASEAN members.

Phong: We also plan on having discussions about how young people in the region can help build an ASEAN community.

Lan: I have a suggestion. Why don't you ask all the students from our school to come up with ideas for activities during the group's visit? This way, everyone will be keener to take part in the event.

Phong: Sounds great, Lan. I'll post a call for ideas on our Youth Union webpage. I hope many students will be interested in contributing to the event.

Lan: OK, I'll look out for the post. I already have some ideas for activities.
