XII. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Millions of animals are killed by plastics every year, from birds to fish to other marine organisms. Nearly 700 species, including endangered ones, are known to have been affected by plastics. Nearly every species of seabird eats plastics.

Most of the deaths to animals are caused by starvation. Seals, whales, turtles, and other animals are trapped by fishing nets. Microplastics have been found in more than 100 marine species, including fish and shrimp which are for our dinner plates. In many cases, these tiny bits pass through the digestive system and are released without consequence. But plastics have also been found to have blocked digestive organs, causing death. Stomachs packed with plastics reduce the urge to eat, causing starvation.

Plastics have been consumed by land-based animals, including elephants, zebras, tigers, cattle, and other large mammals, in some cases causing death.

Tests have also confirmed damage to liver and reproductive systems, causing some species, such as oysters, to produce fewer eggs. New research shows that fish are eating nanoplastics in the first days of life, raising new questions about the effects of plastics on fish populations.

Urbanisation in Malaysia started in the early 1970s. At that time, only around 26 per cent of the population lived in urban areas. After a period of rapid growth, the urban and rural populations were almost equal in the early 1990s. Since then, the urbanisation rate has continued to increase gradually. The urban population, for example, rose from 66 per cent in 2004 to 74 per cent in 2014. At present, Malaysia is known as one of the most urbanised countries in East Asia. It is also one of the most rapidly urbanised regions around the world. According to the latest statistics, over 77 per cent of Malaysia's total population now live in urban areas and cities.

Australia is an interesting example of early urbanisation, which started at the end of the 19th century. At that time, over 60 per cent of the population lived in urban areas. Since then, it has maintained a gradual growth. This was also due to the country's immigration policy, which encouraged people to settle in its coastal, urban areas. Australia is now one of the most urbanised countries in the world, with almost 90 per cent of the population living in urban areas. The two largest cities of Australia, Sydney and Melbourne, are home to over 40 per cent of the country's population.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Green living, often referred to as sustainable living, is a lifestyle that aims to reduce an individual's impact on the environment. It focuses on conserving natural resources, minimizing waste, and promoting eco-friendly practices. This approach includes actions such as recycling, using renewable energy, and adopting habits that reduce carbon footprints. Additionally, green living encourages individuals to make mindful choices in their daily lives, such as using public transportation, supporting local and organic foods, and reducing plastic use.

One key aspect of green living is energy efficiency. By using energy-efficient appliances, reducing electricity consumption, and switching to renewable sources like solar or wind power, individuals can significantly lower their environmental impact. Similarly, reducing water usage by fixing leaks or installing low-flow showerheads is another way to live sustainably.

Transportation is another area where changes can make a difference. Using public transport, biking, or walking instead of driving a car helps reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Electric vehicles are also becoming a popular alternative to traditional fuel-powered cars. Additionally, carpooling is another effective way to minimize individual carbon footprints.

While green living has many advantages, it also comes with challenges. Eco-friendly products can be more expensive, and making lifestyle changes requires effort and commitment. Despite these obstacles, the long-term benefits of preserving the planet outweigh the initial difficulties. Adopting a green lifestyle not only helps the environment but also promotes a healthier and more sustainable way of living for future generations.

Question 15: Which of the following is NOT mentioned as one of the challenges of green living in the passage?

- A. High costs of eco-friendly products
- B. Effort and commitment required for lifestyle changes
- C. Long-term benefits of preserving the planet
- D. Difficulties in finding renewable energy sources

Question 16: The word obstacles in paragraph 4 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____ Question 19: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentences in paragraph 3?

- A. Modifying transportation methods can also lead to significant improvements
- B. Revising transportation strategies can yield positive results.
- C. Changes in transportation can also have a significant impact.
- D. Transportation changes are the hardest part of green living.

Question 20: According to the passage, which of the following is NOT true?

- A. Green living encourages the use of energy-efficient appliances.
- B. Electric vehicles contribute to reducing greenhouse gas emissions.
- C. Green living makes no significant impact on natural resources.
- D. Lifestyle changes for green living require effort and commitment.

Question 21: In which paragraph does the writer mention as energy efficiency for sustainability?

Read the following passage about endangered languages and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

(I)The world of work is constantly evolving, shaped by advancements in technology, changes in societal expectations, and economic shifts.(II) Traditional jobs that once dominated the workforce are now being replaced by roles that require digital literacy and adaptability. (III)The demand for skills like problem-solving, creativity, and teamwork has never been greater, as companies seek employees who can navigate the complexities of the modern workplace. (IV)As a result, continuous learning and professional development have become essential for career success in this dynamic environment.

One significant change is the rise of remote work. Advances in communication technologies have made it possible for employees to work from anywhere, breaking down geographical barriers and offering greater flexibility. However, remote work also presents challenges, such as maintaining work-life balance and ensuring effective collaboration among team members.

Another trend shaping the world of work is the growing importance of lifelong learning. With rapid advancements in technology, workers must continuously update their skills to remain competitive. Many companies now prioritize employees who are willing to learn and adapt to new tools and practices. Additionally, online learning platforms have made it easier than ever for individuals to access training and certifications from the comfort of their homes.

While these changes present exciting opportunities, they also raise concerns about job security and inequality. Automation and artificial intelligence are transforming industries, often at the expense of low-skill jobs. This shift underscores the importance of investing in education and training programs to prepare workers for the future.

Question 23: Where in paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

Conventional jobs that once prevailed in the workforce are now being substituted by positions demanding digital skills and flexibility

A. I B. II C. III D. IV
