The Changing Landscape of Entertainment in the Digital Age

Entertainment has always been a vital part of human culture, shaping societies and influencing creativity throughout history. However, it has undergone significant changes due to technological advancements and the rise of digital media. While traditional forms like cinema and theater still exist, streaming services and social media have transformed how audiences engage with content. This shift raises important questions about the future of entertainment and its impact on society.

The rise of digital platforms has democratized access to a wide range of content. Services like Netflix and Hulu allow viewers to access countless movies and shows instantly. This accessibility empowers creators from diverse backgrounds to share their stories, giving rise to niche genres and independent films. However, the overwhelming number of choices can lead to decision fatigue, making it difficult for consumers to find what they want.

Despite its benefits, digital entertainment also poses challenges. The binge-watching culture, encouraged by platforms that release entire seasons at once, can lead to isolation and negatively affect mental health. Viewers may prioritize screen time over real-life interactions, reducing meaningful connections. Additionally, algorithms that recommend content can create echo chambers, limiting exposure to diverse perspectives.

Looking ahead, technology will continue to shape the entertainment landscape. Innovations like virtual reality (VR) promise immersive experiences that redefine how stories are told. Moreover, user-generated content on platforms such as TikTok allows audiences to participate actively in the entertainment process. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Ecotourism is a form of tourism that emphasizes conservation, responsible travel, and the well-being of local communities. It aims to minimize the environmental impact of tourism and promote awareness of conservation efforts. Ecotourism has become particularly popular in biodiversity-rich areas, where it offers an alternative to traditional tourism, which can harm the environment and disrupt local ecosystems.

One of the main benefits of ecotourism is that it provides an economic incentive for conservation. Local communities that rely on tourism for income are more likely to protect their natural resources. Instead of engaging in activities like deforestation or hunting endangered animals, they can benefit from preserving the environment. This helps to ensure that local wildlife and habitats are protected for future generations.

However, ecotourism also has its drawbacks. Increased human activity in natural areas, even if well-intentioned, can disturb wildlife and lead to environmental degradation. Tourists may leave behind waste or introduce non-native species that threaten local ecosystems. Additionally, ecotourism projects can sometimes prioritize tourist experience over genuine conservation efforts, leading to "greenwashing," where businesses promote themselves as eco-friendly without actually supporting sustainable practices.

For ecotourism to be effective, it must be well-regulated and based on sound environmental principles. This includes limiting the number of visitors to sensitive areas, educating tourists about respectful behavior, and ensuring that a significant portion of profits is reinvested in conservation projects. When managed responsibly, ecotourism can provide a sustainable way to appreciate and protect the natural world.

PART 8

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Some people love working so much that it doesn't feel like work. But most people are not so lucky. They need money to live, so they need a job. However, they don't love their work, and they feel unhappy. And because they are unhappy, they may not work hard. Luckily, some people and companies are trying to improve things.

Dan Price is the CEO of a company based in Seattle. In 2015, he raised the salaries of all his workers to $70,000 a year, much higher than the average income in the United States. To pay for this, he cut his own salary to the same amount. Interestingly, according to a study by Princeton University in 2010 about salaries, people who make around $75,000 each year are happier and feel more satisfaction than those who make less or more money. Since Price made his decision, his workers have been happier and his company has been more successful.

Money is one reason why some workers are unhappy with their jobs. Another reason is working too many hours. Perpetual Guardian, a company based in New Zealand, wanted staff to have a better work-life balance. The company came up with a plan. Its staff were paid for five days, but they only had to work four days each week. Not surprisingly, workers were happier and more satisfied.

Many studies show that people who do things are happier than people who buy things. For example, going on a road trip or learning to play the guitar is better than buying a car or guitar. The famous company Airbnb wants its staff to have great experiences. Workers get $2,000 each year to stay at Airbnb properties anywhere in the world. As a result, many people who work at Airbnb love their jobs.
