Gender equality is not only a fundamental human right, but a necessary foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and sustainable world. There has been progress over the last decades, but the world is not on track to achieve gender equality by 2030.

Women and girls represent half of the world's population and therefore also half of its potential. But gender inequality exists everywhere and limits social progress.

On average, women in the labour market still earn 23 percent less than men globally and women spend about three times as many hours in unpaid domestic and care work as men.

Sexual violence and exploitation, the unequal division of unpaid care and domestic work, and discrimination in public office, all remain huge barriers. All these areas of inequality have been exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic: there has been a dramatic rise in reports of sexual violence, women have taken on more care work due to school closures, and 70% of health and social workers globally are women.

At the current rate, it will take an estimated 300 years to end child marriage, 286 years to close gaps in legal protection and remove discriminatory laws, 140 years for women to be represented equally in positions of power and leadership in the workplace, and 47 years to achieve equal representation in national parliaments. Political leadership, investments and comprehensive policy reforms are needed to remove systemic barriers to achieving Goal 5 Gender equality, which is a cross-cutting objective and must be a key focus of national policies, budgets and institutions.

- _____ 36. Gender equality is not considered essential for a prosperous, and sustainable world.
- _____ 37. Currently, women and girls make up 50% of the world's potential.
- _____ 38. Women globally earn the same as men in the labor market on average.
- _____ 39 The COVID-19 pandemic has had negative impacts on areas of gender inequality.
