5. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

E-commerce has made shopping faster and more convenient, but it also creates a serious problem: packaging waste. When we buy online, each item often arrives in a separate box with plastic wrapping, bubble mailers, tape, and fillers. After opening the package, most of these materials are thrown away within minutes. Because millions of parcels are delivered every day, the amount of waste grows quickly and puts pressure on landfills and recycling systems.

A key issue is that not all packaging is easy to recycle. Some parcels use mixed materials, such as plastic-coated paper or multi-layer bags, which recycling centers cannot process. In addition, “oversized packaging” is common: a small product may be shipped in a large box with extra padding. This wastes resources and increases fuel use because delivery trucks carry more volume than necessary.

However, there are practical solutions. Businesses can redesign their packaging by using right-sized boxes, less plastic, and recycled or biodegradable materials. They can also offer “minimal packaging” options at checkout and encourage customers to choose slower, grouped shipping so fewer boxes are used. Governments and cities can improve recycling guidelines and support collection programs. Finally, consumers can help by reusing boxes, returning packaging through take-back schemes, and buying from brands that use eco-friendly packing.

In short, e-commerce packaging waste is not just a small inconvenience; it is an environmental challenge. With smarter design, clearer policies, and better choices from shoppers, online shopping can become more sustainable without losing its convenience.

B. The environmental impact of e-commerce packaging and possible solutions.

A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

6. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

Tourism - one of the world's largest industries, worth 7.6% of global GDP every year - has a significant impact on the environment, both positive and negative. On the one hand, it can lead to a greater appreciation for nature and conservation, as tourists explore pristine beaches, lush forests, and scenic landscapes. This appreciation can translate into increased funding for national parks, wildlife conservation, and the preservation of cultural heritage sites. For example, the revenue generated by the millions of tourists visiting Australia's Great Barrier Reef also helps fund conservation efforts to protect this unique ecosystem.

However, the large numbers of travellers can also strain these natural wonders. Mass tourism - where the number of tourists outpaces an area's capacity - can damage ecosystems, disrupt or harm local wildlife, and lead to pollution. Venice, for example, has seen its canals crowded with boats and its historic streets thronged with visitors, leading to accelerated wear on its historic sites and increased pollution in its waters. Similarly, popular trekking trails in Nepal have experienced littering, resulting in environmental degradation.

The carbon footprint of tourism is another critical concern. Air travel, a significant component of global tourism, contributes substantially to greenhouse gas emissions and therefore climate change. The aviation sector contributes around 2% of annual global carbon dioxide emissions.

However, while tourism contributes to climate change, global warming in turn has a profound impact on the industry itself. Popular destinations like the Maldives face the threat of rising sea levels, while natural wonders like the Great Barrier Reef are endangered by coral bleaching due to warmer oceans. Additionally, ski resorts are increasingly struggling with shorter seasons due to dwindling snowfall.

Question 1: In paragraph 1, the word “it” refers to _____.

- A. the environment B. tourism C. global GDP D. conservation

Question 2: The word “strain” in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

- A. damage B. protect C. crowd D. pollute

Question 3: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 2?

- A. Mass tourism helps protect ecosystems and wildlife.
B. Mass tourism happens when there are not enough tourists.
C. Too many tourists can harm nature and cause pollution.
D. Tourists always improve the environment.

Question 4: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

- A. Tourism only has negative effects on the environment.
B. Venice has fewer tourists now than before.
C. Air travel contributes to greenhouse gas emissions.
D. Ski resorts now have longer seasons.

Question 5: In which paragraph does the writer mention the impact of climate change on popular destinations?

- A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4
